Everything's So Green!

Despite the challenging economy, the Green Movement continues its steady march into the future. With so many new groups expounding noble missions and spewing unique sets of jargon, we felt compelled to help.

What Are They Talking About?!?

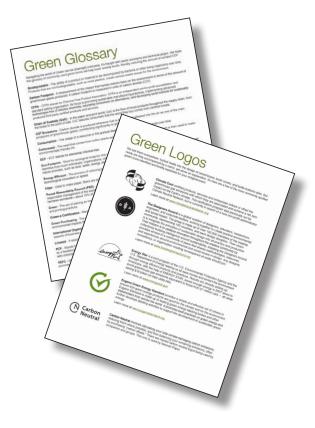

Navigating the many exotic acronyms and technical jargon of Green printing can be downright confusing. Relax! EBSCO Media has compiled a handy glossary of commonly used Green terms to lower your anxiety levels (thereby reducing the amount of exhaled CO2).

What Do They Stand For?

We see them everywhere: tucked neatly into the design of cereal boxes, book covers, and bottle bottoms alike. But rarely are they accompanied by a name, let alone an explanation. So here are a few of the more commonly spotted green logos identified and briefly explained for your environmental enlightenment.

Adobe InDesign Introduces Live Preflight

Adobe has introduced Live Preflight to the latest version of InDesign CS4. This powerful new feature alerts you to potential production problems, allowing you to quickly navigate to the problem, fix it directly in your layout, and continue working. We think it's worlds better than getting an unhappy phone call from your printer after you've gone to press.

Help from EBSCO Media

To help you take full advantage of Live Preflight, Randy Jamerson (EM's resident prepress guru) has created an EBSCO Media Preflight Profile and accompanying tech sheet that explains how to use it.
